Young People, Violence and Political Transition

Neil Jarman

Institute for Conflict Research

Background

- Civil rights campaign against discrimination against Catholics – 1960s
- Rioting / inter-communal violence
- Military presence led to armed conflict
- Politics of ‘self-determination’
- Working class communities

Recent Context

- Ceasefires since 1994
- Peacebuilding includes:
 - New structures of governance
 - New HR & Equality bodies
 - Police reform
 - Economic benefits
- Ongoing inter-communal tensions & low-level violence

Areas of Violence

- Paramilitary activities
- Street disorders
- Anti-social behaviour
- Policing and young people
- Punishment violence

Paramilitary Activities

- Poorly documented
- Armed groups all have youth wings
- Widespread support for armed groups
 - Legitimate political aims of conflict
- Status of paramilitaries
- Cultural legitimisation of violence
- Ceasefire soldiers
 - ‘Bloodied’ through activity

Street Disorder

- Lack of resolution, tensions, segregation
- Violence over threat to ‘traditions’
 - Rioting commonplace
- Young people encouraged as ‘front line’
- Also attracted to the ‘craic’
- Difficulties of control / changing contexts
 - Intergenerational authority

Anti-Social Behaviour

- Recreational rioting
- Expanding contexts of disorder
- No longer 'political'
- Role of young women
- Uses of new technology

Policing and Young People

- Lack of legitimacy of police
- Poor relationships with YP
- Rise of community-based policing

Punishment Violence

- History of ‘paramilitary justice’
- Controlling ‘own’ communities
- Responding to social disorder
- Young people as victims
- Shift to restorative practices

In Conclusion

- Violence in working class communities,
 - But not due to discrimination
- YP violence increasingly autonomous
 - Generational authority compromised
- Conflict legacy - ‘culture of violence’
- Force tolerated in range of contexts
- Rise in hate crimes / DV / violent crime

Drug crime in Rio, racist offences against immigrants, shootings at schools, harassment in Belfast's neighbourhoods, killing brothers and sisters in Ramallah, kids traumatized by war in Bosnia or in the Congo – the involvement of children and adolescents in political and criminal acts of violence in mega-cities, as well as in (post-)conflict zones of recent wars, is an increasingly disturbing phenomenon.

What do we know about the reasons and root causes of youth violence stemming from such a variety of political and cultural backgrounds and contexts? What do (post) war constellations have in common with the urbanized reality of western democracies? Do social exclusion, poverty, the absence of education, and the availability of small arms create contexts which enhance violence and may be considered as „grey zones“ between war and peace? How would we differentiate between politically motivated, socially, ethnically or religiously based, and other ritualized forms of violence? Which patterns of violence are specifically youth related?

The conference will look at recent results and findings of international research on youth violence. In order to better understand the driving forces behind, and to identify political strategies to deal with this critical development, we will try to compare and contrast (post) war and non-war constellations, and the causes or patterns of youth violence they present. What are promising approaches on communal and state levels, amongst civil society actors and those in the field of international co-operation, to tackle the challenge of youth violence?

You are cordially invited to participate in the discussions of this conference.
